

Ursula von der Leyen, European Commission President
Helena Dalli, European Commissioner for Equality
Nuno Brito, Permanent Representative of Portugal to the European Union

Brussels, 12th February 2021

Dear President Von der Leyen,

We, the undersigned, are writing as organisations working on racial justice in Europe to put forward our recommendations ahead of the first EU Summit on Anti-Racism on 19th March 2021.

Following the global uprisings in support of Black Lives Matter and the denouncement of racist violence and police brutality, we were pleased to witness a much-awaited urgency and commitment from European Union leaders to address racism in all forms in Europe. It is vital that this moment is seized and there is a sustained commitment from European leaders to address structural racism in Europe and uphold the ethos of the EU motto, “united in diversity.”

We urge the organisers of the upcoming EU Summit on Anti-Racism to ensure that issues of structural and institutional racism frame the discussions and lead to strong policies and actions. As such, we recommend the following steps be taken by the European Commission and Portuguese Presidency to the EU in the lead up to the EU Summit:

1. Ensure sustained and meaningful participation of racialised groups and anti-racist civil society

The success of the upcoming summit will depend on the extent to which EU leaders adequately and meaningfully engage with those directly affected by racism in Europe. As the primary experts on the structures and manifestations of racism, we must be actively included in the development of the upcoming agenda, priorities and outcomes, and as speakers at the EU summit to ensure that these processes meet the needs of our communities effectively. Policies and procedures developed about us must directly include us and especially the underrepresented members of our communities such as LGBTIQ communities, women, disabled people, people without documents, and religious minorities. This is increasingly urgent considering the under-representation of racial and ethnic minorities amongst EU policymakers.

2. Focus on the institutional and structural dimensions of racism in Europe

As a key milestone in the successful implementation of the EU Anti-Racism Action Plan (ARAP), we believe that the agenda of the upcoming summit should explicitly include discussions about the root causes of racism in Europe, to lay the ground for future meaningful actions to address these. As such, we strongly recommend the EU Anti-Racism Summit focuses on:

- A. The disproportionate impact of COVID-19 on racialised communities - We have seen that the pandemic has disproportionately impacted those already marginalised in broader society. COVID-19 has widened inequalities and we believe that the summit presents an opportunity to discuss the structural and institutional causes of these inequalities
- B. Discriminatory laws and policies - For too long, governments and institutions have promoted laws and policies that increase racism and socio-economic inequality. We need to understand how these laws and policies are connected to historical oppression and how they prevent real justice and equality
- C. Violence and accountability by state actors/agencies - The core feature of the current political moment is how our societies respond to historical and ongoing incidents of discrimination and violence by state agencies such as law enforcement against our communities. This includes outlining concrete steps for accountability and justice
- D. Recognition and redress for histories of injustice against racialised people - A key feature of the European racial justice movement has been to call for recognition and meaningful redress for histories of enslavement, genocide and colonialism and how they lead to structural inequalities today. As many EU countries have still not advanced meaningful processes for redress, this issue must be addressed if we are committed to tackling rising racism and inequalities in our society.

3. Secure public commitments to address structural racism, including concrete support to anti-racist human rights defenders in Europe

Lastly, we believe that it is vital that the EU summit leads to concrete commitments to secure a successful implementation of the ARAP and lead to positive outcomes for racialised communities in Europe, including:

- A. Summit conclusions outlining Member States' support to the implementation of the ARAP and National Action Plans against Racism
- B. Advisory body of representatives of racialised communities and racial justice leaders working with the EU on the implementation of the ARAP and ensure the meaningful participation mainstreaming civil society organisations and other stakeholders in the design and implementation of future EU laws and policies
- C. Commitment to further national efforts to collect equality data disaggregated by race to track and measure improvement on political, social and economic indicators
- D. Specific funding priorities and monitoring to ensure EU funds (including COVID-19 recovery funds) promote racial justice and improve the socio-economic conditions of racialised communities

We look forward to your response as to how such recommendations will be included in the upcoming EU Summit on Anti-Racism.

Sincerely,

1. The European Network Against Racism
2. Equinox Initiative for Racial Justice
